

Hazard Recognition and Control Workshop (On Site Customization)

Why Schedule a Trial Workshop?

We find that many organizations have identified the need for employees and leaders to recognize and control hazards in the workplace. Providing this type of training to all employees requires a significant investment of time and money. To aid in the decision-making process before committing to training all employees, we suggest a trial of Carl Potter's Hazard Recognition and Control Workshop. The trial workshop allows you to determine if what we do is a fit for your organization. And it comes with a guarantee.

Our safety consultant/presenter will arrive the day before the workshop to conduct a valuable safety walk-through of your facility. The purpose of the walk-through is two-fold: 1) the consultant/presenter gains first-hand insight into your facility that is incorporated into the training the following day and 2) you and/or your personnel who will participate in the walk-through benefit from the observations of the consultant regarding unidentified or uncontrolled hazards as well as recognition of positive situations that can foster a safety culture. During the walk-through, the consultant/presenter will take pictures that will be used for your workshop. Your employees will benefit from a workshop that is customized to their work location.

At the end of the workshop participants will respond to our evaluation that will provide feedback to determine if the workshop was a success. Based on the feedback, we will decide if the time spent with you was valuable. If the participants' evaluations indicate less than a 60% success rate, your company will only be responsible for the 50% deposit that was paid at the time of the agreement to conduct the workshop. No balance will be due. That's our guarantee.

Our experience is that the workshop hits the mark every time. Many of the participants say:

- This was the best safety training I have ever had (many times this is from employees with more than 20 years in the company).
- Every employee should be required to take this class.
- I wished the class was longer... (how many times do you hear that from participants of any training?).
- Before this class I didn't understand the real importance of mitigating the hazard.
- Now I know what I am suppose to do about safety.
- After taking this class I believe zero injuries is attainable.

We hope you will consider scheduling a trial workshop in your workplace. If you don't decide to move forward with having all employees participate in future workshops, you will still benefit:

- Participants in the walk-through (safety leader, plant manager, others) will gain insight from an outside expert's observations.
- You will have digital copies of all photographs taken by the consultant.
- 30 employees will have experienced training in hazard recognition and control that they can apply immediately.
-

Please email Carl Potter to schedule a call to discuss this process at: carl@potterandassociates.com or call our office at: 800-259-6209

About the Author and the Origin of this Workshop

Since 1992 Carl Potter has worked with companies across the U.S. and Canada to target zero-injuries in the workplace. He does this by consulting, delivering his seminars and workshop, and presenting keynote speeches at many state and national safety conferences, association meeting, and company safety events. He has written hundreds of articles for industrial magazines, authored and co-authored more than 8 books on safety. Thousands of safety leaders across the globe also depend on his weekly blog at: www.safetytopics.com to improve their company safety culture. Carl's Safety and the Supervisor Seminar is one of the most successful educational products he delivers, but he realized that something was missing.

About 2006 Carl noticed that even with the safety rules and tools workers have at their disposal to mitigate risk of injury hazards present workers were still getting hurt. The problem he identified was that employees were either ignoring hazards, walking right past them without taking action, or writing a work order to fix a hazard they could mitigate themselves. Using his hands-on experience and education in safety of more that 34 years Carl developed his Hazard Recognition and Control Workshop to solve the problem.

Participants who attend this workshop not only are better at identifying hazards, but they take responsibility for mitigating the risk presented by the hazard immediately.

This workshop has become so popular that he has now begun training experienced independent safety professionals to conduct this workshop.

Carl Potter is a Board Certified Safety Professional, and Certified Management Consultant, and Certified Speaking Professional. He is also a Certified Instrument Flight Instructor, Aircraft Commander and Flight Examiner for the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary a division of Homeland Security.

Carl is continually researching and learning about safety and brings relevant information to his clients that leads them to improve their current safety culture.